

SRI International Alumni Association

2020 Hall of Fame Award

Presented to

Joyce Berry

for exceptional contributions to the enduring success of SRI International.
Presented on this fifteenth day of October, two thousand and twenty.

During the 24-year existence of the SRI Alumni Association, one person has been dedicated to its success more than any other: Joyce Berry. The duration and span of her contributions are huge, both in the formal work she performed and in the myriad informal roles she took on as needed. Joyce invariably did them all well.

Joyce not only maintained all the membership records, but also wrote a Membership Data Manual, which proved helpful when she was training her replacement. Joyce designed and assembled the Association's newsletter from 2001 through 2009. Her leadership at the annual reunions, Spring Fling events, and Hall of Fame awards was impressive: Among other things, she provided ways for tracking and reliably creating name tags for the many reunion and Spring Fling attendees, produced the Hall of Fame certificates and posters that documented the inductees' contributions, and maintained a record of each year's inductions. In all she did, Joyce set a standard of excellence for those who follow her.

While this nomination accentuates Joyce's contributions to the Association, she also had a notable career at SRI. Joyce began her career in 1965 as a report typist and later became a report coordinator for Poulter Laboratory. In 1977 she became the supervisor of the centralized Technical Illustration group. After the group was decentralized in 1978, Joyce became the supervisor of the Physical Sciences Division Report and Proposal Service and was also asked to resume her role as Poulter Laboratory report coordinator, positions she held until her retirement in 1997. Joyce's superior organizational skills and multiple other talents were invaluable in expeditiously producing accurate reports and proposals. Her work ethic was highly valued by the report authors and resulted in reports that received regular accolades from SRI clients.
